RISK-OFF Closure of the Strait of Hormuz instantly reprices geopolitical risk premium across global markets.

As of July 12, 2026, markets are absorbing a severe geopolitical shock following U.S. military strikes against Iran and the IRGC's announcement that the Strait of Hormuz is closed until further notice. Despite the magnitude of the event, Brent crude trading at $76.01 suggests markets may not have fully priced in the supply disruption risk. On the crypto front, BTC sits at $63,814, down 0.46% over 24 hours, while the Fear & Greed Index registers a reading of 26 (Fear), confirming that geopolitical uncertainty is weighing heavily on risk appetite. On the macro side, the 10-year U.S. Treasury yield climbed to 4.57% while the 2-year yield fell to 4.16%, producing a +41 basis point 2s10s spread that signals a steepening yield curve. Critically, this Tuesday's July 14 CPI release (YoY forecast: 3.8%, prior: 4.2%) will be a pivotal event; the risk that the Hormuz crisis reignites energy-driven inflation could push back Fed rate cut expectations significantly.

Analyst Note: The 2s10s spread widening to +40.9 bps and the copper/gold ratio rising 2.71% suggest economic activity expectations have not fully collapsed; however, elevated stablecoin dominance at 11.33% confirms that crypto investors remain in defensive mode, parking capital in stable assets rather than deploying into risk.

BTC's funding rate stands at a positive +0.0085, indicating residual long bias in perpetual futures markets, while ETH's funding rate has flipped negative to -0.0073, signaling that short pressure is building on the altcoin side. This divergence suggests that under geopolitical stress, altcoin risk is being priced more aggressively than Bitcoin.

Analyst Note: Spot Bitcoin ETFs recorded a total inflow of $90.4 million on July 10, with IBIT alone attracting $86.8 million; positive inflows signal institutional buying pressure, though the historical flow data reveals a volatile picture since late June, with the recovery remaining tentative rather than conviction-driven. Monitoring whether these inflows accelerate or reverse in the face of the Hormuz shock will be key.
