Global Macro & Crypto Market Intelligence

Fri, Jul 24 2026

RISK-OFF Middle East escalation drives oil above $90, bond yields surge, and markets retreat into defensive positioning.

Global markets are firmly in risk-off mode today. The U.S. military completing its 13th consecutive night of strikes on Iran, combined with Trump's vow to punish Iran and the Houthis, has driven Brent crude to $92.67 (up over 5% on the week), reigniting inflation fears and battering bond markets. The U.S. 10-year Treasury yield surged to 4.70% while the 2-year hit 4.31%. VIX stands at 18.93, reflecting elevated anxiety. In crypto, Bitcoin holds near $65,453 while the Fear & Greed Index sits at 28 (Fear). BTC dominance at 56.8% shows relative resilience versus altcoins, with total crypto market cap at $2.31 trillion. Critically, the FOMC meeting is just 5 days away on July 29; oil-driven inflation pressure reinforces the 'higher for longer' rate narrative ahead of the Fed decision. Eurozone Flash PMI data from France and Germany due today could provide additional directional cues.

The Semiconductor ETF SMH fell 1.15%, while the Copper/Gold ratio posted a +1.16% daily gain — a constructive signal for industrial demand — though the broader picture continues to weigh on overall risk appetite.
