RISK-OFF Escalating Middle East tensions, ETF outflows, and FOMC uncertainty reinforce a risk-off environment across markets.

Markets today are navigating dual headwinds from sharply escalating US-Iran tensions and the FOMC rate decision due tonight. While VIX at 18.24 (down 2.3%) appears relatively contained, Brent crude surging 3.82% to $87.30 and gold holding near record highs at $4,102 signal that markets are actively pricing geopolitical risk. The DXY at 101.33 remains soft while the 10-year Treasury yield pulled back to 4.64%, reflecting a blend of safe-haven demand and expectations that the Fed will hold rates at 3.75% at today's FOMC meeting. Tomorrow's Core PCE (forecast: 0.2% MoM) and Advance GDP (forecast: 2.1%) releases will be crucial for shaping the Fed's forward guidance narrative. In crypto, BTC is holding around $64,387 while the Fear & Greed Index sits at 29 (Fear) and BTC dominance remains elevated at 56.6%, confirming a rotation from altcoins into Bitcoin as investors de-risk.

Hormuz Risk Premium: How US-Iran Escalation Is Repricing Crude Oil

The joint US-Saudi strike on Iran-backed groups in Iraq, Iran's rejection of Oman's proposal to jointly manage the Strait of Hormuz, and the exclusive report of Chinese shoulder-launched missile systems arriving in Iran within weeks are collectively driving up the geopolitical risk premium on Gulf transit. With roughly 20% of global crude shipments passing through Hormuz, any blockade scenario being priced in would show up first in EIA inventory data and Brent-WTI spread dynamics. Key signal to watch: weekly crude inventory change and whether the Brent forward curve is shifting into deeper backwardation.

FOMC Day: Fed Rate Decision Meets Tomorrow's GDP + Core PCE Double Test

Today (July 29) at 21:00 ET, the Fed publishes its Federal Funds Rate decision and FOMC statement; market consensus expects rates to hold at 3.75%. The real question is how hawkish or dovish Powell's language will be ahead of tomorrow's Q2 Advance GDP (consensus 2.1%) and Core PCE MoM (consensus 0.2%). With the 10-year yield at 4.64% and the 2-10 spread at just 33 basis points, the Fed's forward guidance is the key driver of curve shape. Key signal: any change in 'data-dependent' language in the FOMC statement and the shift in September cut probability on CME FedWatch.

PRIMARY SOURCES / REPORTS:

- Federal Reserve — FOMC Calendar & Statements — Access today's full FOMC statement and rate decision; compare language changes against the prior statement word-for-word.
- CME FedWatch Tool — Monitor real-time shifts in market-implied probabilities for September and November rate cuts immediately after the FOMC release.
- BEA — PCE Price Index — Track tomorrow's Core PCE MoM release here; a print above the 0.2% consensus would materially constrain the Fed's easing path.

BTC ETF Outflows, Negative Coinbase Premium & Fear Index: Has US Spot Demand Dried Up?

As of July 28 data, spot Bitcoin ETFs saw a total net outflow of $49.7 million, with IBIT alone recording -$54.8 million. The Coinbase premium has been persistently negative for over a week, reaching approximately -0.14 today, signaling a retreat by US institutional buyers. The Fear & Greed Index stands at 29 ('Fear') and BTC perpetual funding rates have flipped negative (-0.0022). Key thresholds to watch: whether ETF flows remain negative for a second consecutive day and whether the Coinbase premium recovers above zero ahead of the FOMC decision.

PRIMARY SOURCES / REPORTS:

Analyst Note: The latest Spot Bitcoin ETF data (July 28) shows IBIT recorded an outflow of $54.8 million, bringing total net flows to -$49.7 million — a clear signal that institutional players are reducing exposure ahead of the FOMC decision. Looking at the historical flow data, the recovery from the large outflow wave of July 23-24 (totaling -$465 million) remains incomplete, adding to near-term caution.
