Global Macro & Crypto Market Intelligence

Thu, Sep 24 2026

NEUTRAL Rising bond yields and volatility are offsetting strong ETF inflows and elevated crypto appetite, keeping the market outlook neutral.

Global markets are sending mixed signals, keeping the neutral regime intact. The U.S. 10-year Treasury yield rose to 5.114%, while the VIX at 16.33 and MOVE at 95.45 point to higher rate volatility; the DXY edged up to 101.279. Nasdaq 100 futures fell 1.05% and SMH declined 1.00%, although a 5.20% rise in the copper-gold ratio supports a growth-sensitive interpretation. Total crypto market capitalization dropped 6.62% over 24 hours to $2.81 trillion, with BTC at $83,209; nevertheless, the Fear & Greed index remained at 71, classified as Greed, while BTC dominance stood at 59.24%. Spot Bitcoin ETFs attracted $346.9 million on September 23, supporting medium-term demand, but the sharp intraday crypto decline points to deleveraging. This week's U.S. jobless claims, consumer sentiment and inflation expectations will be watched ahead of the Fed's October 28 meeting; the current 2026 dot-plot median is 4.1%.

STRATEGIC RESEARCH FOCUS

COMMODITIES

Is Asia's oil-import rebound a durable demand shift?

Reuters reports that Asia's crude imports reached a post-Iran-conflict high in September but remained weak, raising questions about the quality of the energy-market rebound. The research question is whether higher imports reflect genuine end-demand strength or restocking and trade-flow changes; the key threshold is whether weekly US inventories, production, and refinery utilization confirm the same direction.

PRIMARY SOURCES / REPORTS:

- EIA — Weekly Petroleum Status Report — Review crude and product inventories, production, imports, exports, and refinery utilization to test whether demand recovery is confirmed.
- Reuters — COMMENTARY: Asia's crude oil imports hit post-Iran conflict high in September, but remain weak - Reuters — Read the reported September import increase, the post-conflict comparison, and the article's evidence that demand remains weak.

CRYPTO

Are ETF inflows creating real Bitcoin demand amid deleveraging?

Bitcoin and Ethereum ETFs recorded net inflows of $346.9 million and $104.5 million respectively, while total crypto market capitalization fell 6.62% in 24 hours and BTC and ETH open interest declined 7.28% and 11.72%. The research question is whether institutional spot demand can absorb derivatives deleveraging; the signals to track are continued ETF flows, BTC's $79,613.995 support and $85,311.83 resistance, and a renewed overshoot in funding rates.

PRIMARY SOURCES / REPORTS:

- Farside — Bitcoin ETF Flows (All Data) — Track whether the $346.9 million total Bitcoin ETF inflow continues and how flows are distributed across funds including IBIT and FBTC.
- Farside — Ethereum ETF Flows — Check whether the $104.5 million total ETH ETF inflow persists, particularly across ETHA and FETH.
- Coinglass — Derivatives Data — Examine the decline in BTC and ETH open interest, funding rates, and whether deleveraging is reversing into new leveraged positioning.

Stephen Curry says WNBA needs to keep conversations about the league 'focused on basketball'

NBA star Stephen Curry, an investor in women's sports, says the WNBA's next commissioner should keep conversations about the league "focused on basketball."

AI Insight: Stephen Curry's call for WNBA discussions to remain focused on basketball has little direct macro pricing impact for investors. Against a neutral regime and weaker Nasdaq futures, the story mainly highlights narrative and governance considerations in sports investments; its link to funding and ETF flows is limited.

New York Fed's Williams says it's 'reasonable' to expect another rate hike by year-end

John Williams was speaking at the London Macro Policy Forum on Thursday.

AI Insight: New York Fed President John Williams' view that another rate hike by year-end would be reasonable is a hawkish signal consistent with the 5.114% 10-year yield and rising MOVE index. The message could reinforce short-term pressure on crypto and technology shares despite strong ETF inflows.

Norway gives additional $13 million in aid to Palestinians - Reuters

AI Insight: Norway's additional $13 million in aid to Palestinians is primarily humanitarian and has limited direct market impact. However, continued regional tensions can raise the oil risk premium, consistent with Brent at $104.88, while higher yields may weigh on risk assets.
